

El Salvador Living Water International ▪ October 29th-November 4th

"WHY WATER? At least 663 MILLION PEOPLE lack access to an improved source of drinking water—that's 1 in 11 of us. In the places where we work, it's more like 1 in 2. Without water, there's no foundation for other forms of development. Helping communities create sustainable water, sanitation, hygiene, and Christian witness programs—in partnership with local churches—is the best way we've found to demonstrate God's love. Why? Because the water crisis affects poverty, women, health and education—and for us it's a spiritual issue. In the past 25 years, 2 billion people have gained access to safe drinking water—but that's not the best story we have to tell. For us, water is a picture of living water—the good news that God wants to transform people, communities, and the whole world through the person of Jesus Christ."

You can be part of a team that delivers the hope of the Gospel by digging a water well with Living Water International. Join us as we share the true living water - the good news that God wants to transform people, communities, and the whole world through the person of Jesus Christ.

El Salvador Living Water International ▪ October 29th-November 4th

“The Republic of El Salvador is the smallest and most densely populated country in Central America, bordered by the Pacific Ocean, Guatemala and Honduras. It is similar in size to Massachusetts and the largest city is also the capital, San Salvador.

El Salvador is rich in natural resources, including hydropower, geothermal power, petroleum, and arable land. Agriculture has historically been a driver of the economy; key products are coffee, sugar, corn, and cotton. Though small, El Salvador has the third largest economy in Central America. Many Salvadoran families lean on foreign remittances, where family members in the US send funds home.

Mountainous El Salvador is known as the “Land of Volcanoes” and is also susceptible to earthquakes and hurricanes. The country’s main environmental concerns include soil erosion, soil contamination from toxic wastes, and water pollution. More specifically, there is insufficient water quality and domestic sewage water control, along with weak management of chemical substances and hazardous waste.

The majority (an estimated 90%) of the population is composed of the mestizo ethnic group, mixed Amerindian and white. Amerindian descendants include the Pipils, Lencas and the Mayas. Spanish is the official language and is spoken by the majority.

WEATHER Teams can expect warm and coastal weather, with highs in the 90s and lows in the 80s. Drink lots of water and take time to rest in the shade to avoid heat exhaustion. If traveling during the rainy season (May to November), be sure to pack a light rain coat.

FOOD If you’re expecting to lose a few pounds on your trip—don’t! Our wonderful cooks won’t allow it. Team members will have a mixture of typical Salvadoran meals and everyday American fare. Expect to eat plenty of black beans, rice, tortillas, chicken, plantains, and eggs. One incredible blessing for team members is the opportunity to share a home cooked meal each work day prepared by the women of the community. These generous women work hard from morning until mealtime to lovingly and sacrificially prepare your lunch. The smile on their faces as you eat is a memory to last a lifetime. (Lunches are prepared with safe water provided by Living Water.)

LODGING Teams will stay in one of two locations—either the Living Water Team house near Acajulta, or the Rancho Estero y Mar, a hotel located in La Paz. In both locations team members will be divided by gender into air-conditioned bedrooms with full bathrooms. Sheets and pillows are provided, but bring your own towels. Both locations have pools (and the Pacific Ocean) on site, so pack a swimsuit! (Swimming in the ocean is permitted during low-tide only.)

If you have special eating considerations, please contact your Trip Coordinator.

El Salvador Living Water International ▪ October 29th-November 4th

EL SALVADOR CULTURE

It cannot be stressed enough that the time spent in Central America is primarily about relationships. When establishing a relationship with a Salvadoran resident, it is very important to be sensitive to their culture. Central Americans as a whole are overwhelmingly kind and giving, and Salvadorans are no different. They are proud of their heritage and though there might be a sense of shyness at first, that will pass soon after greetings are shared.

» Latin American culture is generally very proper, so be polite and use good manners. Do not be abrasive, aggressive, or demanding. Body language communicates more than we realize—seek to communicate what is in your heart with your face and your actions.

» Latin America is a male-dominated culture. Whether we agree with it or not, as we are coming into their country, we need to respect their cultural norms. Women need to dress extra modestly. Do not hold extended eye contact with men, and do not allow your body orientation to become too close as you may communicate something you do not intend. Men can set a great example through their interactions with female team members and the local women. These actions will be watched and you can effect positive change.

» Morality is very important to Salvadorans and they have very high standards for Christians. A Christian witness could easily be hurt by something that might not be considered offensive to North American Christians. For this reason, it is very important that there is no consumption/use of alcohol, drugs, or tobacco, no use of profanity or innuendos, nor inappropriate displays of affection.
